Wells Fargo & Company*

Yessica Arellano is a Business Specialist for Wells Fargo Bank in the Houston North Region. She has over five years of experience assessing business owner's financial needs. She began her career as a teller and soon after became a personal banker where she learned that helping business owners grow their business was her passion. To further her development, Arellano became a business and Wells at Work advocate. For the past three years, she has served as a business specialist providing financial expertise to help new and established business owners start and grow their businesses.

Arellano is passionate about serving in the community. She has partnered with different community organizations, such as local chambers and consulates to teach new entrepreneurs small business planning, as well as be a contact for any future needs in their business cycle. She believes in creating long lasting relationships with her customers and community.

Arellano is currently the president for Wells Fargo Houston Latin Connection Chapter, an affinity group for team members with an interest in the Hispanic/Latino culture. Through Latin Connection, she is very involved in educating our youth. In addition, she has participated in several small business events, such as Houston Business Innovation Week, the Baker Ripley Entrepreneur Program, Houston Hispanic Educational Forum, and the Hispanic Scholarship Fund's College Camp.

Yessica Arellano is very proud of her Mexican heritage and her family. She is married and a proud mother of three young boys.
